PREFACE

SIMPLE BUT PRACTICAL

The author's aim has been to make this little book of Japanese conversation as simple but as practical as possible. Simplicity and practical utility have been his sole aim in compiling this volume—simple so as to discourage no student of the language; but equally practical so that every phrase in this book may be found useful all at once, in new surroundings and in daily contact with new acquaintances.

The author would not compel his students to memorize sentences, but he hands out such expressions which will be of frequent use fulfilling needs and purposes in daily life, so that by repeated use the phrases and sentences will become in time the natural acquisition of the students, just as children learn talking in their mother tongue without any special effort at memorizing.

Remembering, however, that those who use this book are not children but adults who know some language or languages, the author was not forgetful of the vital necessity of constructive as well as analytic explanations—a sort of solid food apportioned to the good digestion of a grown up person. The phrases in this book are like milk, of easy and speedy digestion, while the diagrams explaining the peculiar construction of Japanese sentences are comparable to a palatable and nutritious food in a solid form.

The students may say, after going through a few Japanese sentences that Japanese talk backwards, that is to say, the head in English is the tail in Japanese, and vice versa. So it is, but please remember that you are on the opposite side of the globe when you are in Japan—America sees the setting sun before Japan bids welcome to the rising sun which again, after the few hours it goes down beyond our western horizon, rises up in Europe as the morning sun. It is the same sun whether it rises in the East or sinks in the West.

If you always use your own standard of time, you are bound to mix up American P.M. with Japanese A.M., or Japanese P.M. with European A.M., as you get confused in other matters by measuring other people with your own standard. Forget the hour in New York or in London, while you are in Tokyo; otherwise you might say "Oha-yo" when you retire at night or "Oyasumi" at breakfast, in this Land, that stands just as much on a level as your own country but on the opposite side of the globe.

In presenting this little book of Japanese phrases for the use of beginners, the author implores them to forget their own grammar for a while and try to think as we Japanese do, and learn Japanese as our children unconsciously and without criticism begin to acquire the full command of this most difficult language in the world. The Japanese language will become the easiest in the world, as everything Japanese will, in course of time, seem right and proper—When You Change Your Mind and See Things from an Opposite Angle. Good luck to those who may use this little book as the first guide to learn our language as well as to a better understanding of the Orient.

PRONUNCIATION

- a* is pronounced like a in father, but is shorter,
ai (diphthong) like ai in aisle.
b as in English
au like ow in cow, but sounded at the back of the palate.
ch is soft as in choose, child.
d as in English.
e like e in pen.
ei (diphthong) like ai in vain.
f between an English f and h.
g in the body of a word, and in the particle ga, has the sound of ng in king; at the beginning of a word, and in words formed by reduplication, such as goro-goro, gata-gata, g has the hard sound of g in goat.
h generally as in English; the exact sound of hi can only be acquired by ear.
i like i in machine; in a syllable terminated by a consonant like i in pin.
j as in English.
k as in English.
m as in English.
n when followed by ch, d, n, r, s, t, or z, as in English; when followed by f, h, w, or y, it nearly resembles the French terminal n; when followed by g or k it is pronounced like ng in king.

- o* like o in tobacco.
ō like o in over, but more sonorous.
ou like ou in though.
p as in English.
r resembles an English r; the exact sound can only be acquired by ear.
s like s in sat; the exact sound of sh can only be acquired by ear.
t as in English.
u like u in put.
ū resembles u in rude; the exact sound can only be acquired by ear.
w as in English.
y as in English.
z as in English.

Japanese in 3 Weeks

Japanese Conversation Made Easy.

One .....	Ichì	Six .....	Roku
Two .....	Ni	Seven .....	Shichi
Three .....	San	Eight .....	Hachi
Four.....	Shi	Nine .....	Ku
Five .....	Go	Ten .....	Jyu

Numbers above ten can be made up by the combination of the above numerals; thus:

Eleven.....Jyu-ichi.....(ten-one)

Thirteen.....Jyu-san.....(ten-three)

Seventeen .....Jyu-shichi .....(ten-seven)

Twenty .....Ni-jyu .....(two-ten)

Sixty .....Roku-jyu .....(six-ten)

Eighty .....Hachi-jyu.....(eight-ten)

Hundred .....Hyaku

150 .....Hyaku-go-jyu ...(hundred-five-ten)

183 .....Hyaku-hachi-jyu-san ...(hundred-eight-ten-three)

Thousand .....Sen

1928 .....Sen-ku-hyaku-ni-jyu-hachi

(thousand-nine-hundred-two-ten-eight)

ORDINAL NUMBERS

Prefix word "Dai" before numerals; thus:

First .....	Dai-ichi
Second .....	Dai-ni
Fifth .....	Dai-go
Eighth .....	Dai-hachi
Twenty-second .....	Dai-Ni-jyu-ni
Hundredth .....	Dai-hyaku

FRACTIONS

Half.....	Hanbun.
Third .....	Sanbun no ichi
Quarter .....	Shibun no ichi

MULTIPLE NUMBERS

Suffix word "bai" to numerals.

Double .....	Ni-bai
Treble .....	San-bai
Fourfold .....	Shi-bai

App'y the above numerals to "gatsu" (month) to get the name of months:

January .....	Ichi-gatsu	( 1st month )
February .....	Ni-gatsu	( 2nd " )
March .....	San-gatsu	( 3rd " )
April .....	Shi-gatsu	( 4th " )
May .....	Go-gatsu	( 5th " )
June .....	Roku-gatsu	( 6th " )
July .....	Shichi-gatsu	( 7th " )
August .....	Hachi-gatsu	( 8th " )
September .....	Ku-gatsu	( 9th " )

October .....	Jyu-gatsu	(10th month)
November .....	Jyu-ichi-gatsu	(11th „ )
December .....	Jyu-ni-gatsu	(12th „ )

And the days of the month by adding the word “ nichi ” :

1st .....	Ich-nichi
2nd .....	Ni-nichi
3rd .....	San-nichi
4th .....	(Exception) Yokka
5th .....	Go-nichi
6th .....	Roku-nichi
7th .....	Shichi-nichi
8th .....	Hachi-nichi
9th .....	Ku-nichi
10th .....	(Exception) Tōka
11th .....	Jyu-ichi-nichi
15th .....	Jyu-go-nichi
17th .....	Jyu-shichi-nichi
20th .....	(Exception) Hatsuka
25th .....	Ni-jyu-go-nichi
28th .....	Ni-jyu-hachi-nichi
30th .....	San-jyu-nichi
31st .....	San-jyu-ichi-nichi

The above are always understood, although colloquially we say of dates below the 10th and a few other exceptional days as follows:

1st .....	Tsuitachi	6th.....	Muika
2nd .....	Futsuka	7th.....	Nanuka
3rd .....	Mikka	8th.....	Yoka
4th .....	Yokka	9th.....	Kokonoka
5th .....	Itsuka	10th.....	Tōka

20th .....	Hatsuka	30th.....	Misōka
24th .....	Ni-jyu-yokka	31st.....	„

N.B.—Misōka means last day of the month.

The order of months and days runs as follows:

25th January .....	Ichigatsu ni-jyu-go-nichi
15th March.....	San-gatsu jyu-go-nichi
10th October .....	Jyugatsu tōka

WEEK DAYS

Monday .....	Getsuyō(bi)
Tuesday .....	Kayō(bi)
Wednesday .....	Suiyō(bi)
Thursday .....	Mokuyō(bi)
Friday .....	Kinyō(bi)

Lightening .....	Inabikari

METALS

Gold.....	Kin	Lead.....	Namari
Silver .....	Gin	Steel.....	Hagane
Copper .....	Dō		(or Kōtetsu)
Iron .....	Tetsu	Coal .....	Sekitan

TITLES OF ADDRESS

In Japanese, titles of address follow proper names; thus:

Mr. Jones .....	Jones san
Mr. Yamamoto .....	Yamamoto san
Mrs. Hopkins .....	Hopkins fujin
Mrs. Thomas .....	Thomas fujin
Miss Wallace .....	Wallace jō (or san)
Miss Toyota .....	Toyota jō (or san)
Prince Hayashi .....	Hayashi kōshaku
Princess Hayashi.....	Hayashi kō-shaku fujin
Marquis Miyamoto.....	Miyamoto kō-shaku
Marchioness Miyamoto.....	Miyamoto kō-shaku fujin
Count Miyata .....	Miyata haku-shaku
Countess Miyata .....	Miyata haku-shaku fujin
Viscount Yamane .....	Yamane Shi-shaku
Viscountess Yamane .....	Yamane shi-shaku fujin
Baron Aoki .....	Aoki dan-shaku
Baroness Aoki .....	Aoki dan-shaku fujin

Or, these titled persons may be more simply addressed by words "kakka" (for men) and "kakka-fujin" (for women), suffixed to their names; thus:

Tokugawa kakka or Toyota kakka fujin. The word "kakka" is conveniently used in place of "you" addressing dignitaries in second person, although these words are slowly going out of usage.

PRONOUNS

I .....	Watakushi	He (or she).....	Ano-kata
You.....	Anata	It .....	Sore

For plural forms of these pronouns suffix "ra" as watakushi-ra, anata-ra, ano-kata-ra and sore-ra.

ARE JAPANESE EXPRESSIONS TOPSY-TURVY?

Are Japanese expressions always topsy-turvy? Foreign students of the Japanese language think so, but before they can learn our language they should examine our expressions entirely from a new angle and try to think in our way. Once they begin to do so, Japanese sentences will become just as logical and smooth as their own are arranged.

For instance, a Japanese says "Watakushi no chichi" (I/of/father), but "watakushi no" is a possessive case of "I" or "my" in English and "watakushi no chichi" becomes "my father." The English language, in a sense, is more complicated because it has entirely different and un-associated words for nominative, possessive and objective cases respectively, namely "I," "my" and "me." We wish to question what relation there is between "I" and "my" and "me." There exists no relation between the words in nominative, possessive and objective cases; each is entirely a new word without association of idea. To our mind, it is more logical to say "I" (nominative case), "of I" (possessive) and "to I" (objective) than using the three entirely different and un-connected words when each of them is closely related to word "self."

"Mr. James, of Boston, came to Tokyo," becomes in Japanese:

"Boston no James san wa Tokyo ni ki-mashita," which is literally:

"Boston's James Mr. Tokyo-to came," which certainly reads topsy-turvy, and foreigners may say "this is an intolerable jumble and an impossibility, and yet it is really:

"Boston's James/Mr./to Tokyo/came."

Now, in English, a letter to the same Mr. James is addressed in the following manner:

Mr. James,
Boston,
U.S.A.

A Japanese reverses it and writes:

U.S.A.
Boston,
James, Mr.

Of these three lines in the address, for instance, which is the first that necessarily catches the eye of a post clerk sorting out thousands of letters?.....not the word 'James' nor 'Mr.' nor 'Boston' but the word 'U.S.A.' After the letter is placed in the "For San Francisco" or "For Seattle" pouch and reaches the American port, then the word 'Boston' becomes next in importance before the word 'James' is looked for, which, again, in Boston, Jameses must be sorted out before it is ascertained which James is the addressee. 'Mr.' is the final in importance.

Now, judge for yourself which manner of addressing a person is more logical and which is really topsy-turvism.

"I go to a theatre with you." This sentence reads in Japanese:

"Watakushi wa anata to shibai e yuki-masu," or

"I/you-with/theatre-to/go." or (I and you) (to theatre) (go) while the English form runs.....:(I go) (to theatre) (with you).

"But," you say, "how funny that in Japanese sentences the noun in the objective case always stands next to the subjective word and the verb indicating what one is or does follows the objective noun!"

"Yes, that may look indeed funny when considered from the English grammatical usage," a Japanese may retort, "but when two friends, Jim and George, go on their way together, they stand together.....whether a dog may follow them or may he bark at them."

Again, Jim's hat and George's shoes are in contact with Jim's head or George's feet whether both are new or old or whether the hat is too small while the shoe pinches. So Japanese say: "Can't two nouns stand together before we speak of their action or what they are?"

ARE YOU NOW QUITE POSITIVE THAT ENGLISH IS ALWAYS CORRECT AND JAPANESE UNPARDONABLY TOPSY-TURVY? If not, then forget your English forms of expressions for a while and study Japanese as Japanese do, to make yourself proficient in the language in less time than you can by trying to build a Japanese sentence while thinking in English.

PECULIAR JAPANESE GREETINGS,

Which have no Equivalents in English.

Certain peculiar phrases almost daily used by Japanese have no equivalents in English and these expressions cannot be translated into any foreign language inasmuch as they belong exclusively to the Japanese way of speaking. If, however, foreigners visiting Japan wish to observe the old saying that "When you are in Rome, do as Romans do," then these greetings must become a necessary part of their knowledge. A proper explanation of these phrases can only be given to foreign students of the Japanese language and customs through examples and by picturing the circumstances under which they are used. Let us describe a day's life of Mr. Yoshida, an imaginary Japanese gentleman, on a visit to his friend's home:

Mr. Yoshida gets up in the morning and greets and is greeted by each member of the family:

"Ohayō." ..... "Good morning."

At the breakfast, he says to his host and hostess:

"Itadaki-masu." (I accept your offer.)

The host or hostess says in answer:

"Dōzo." ..... "Please."

"Osomatsu-desu." (only plain food, sir.)

When he has finished his breakfast, he says:

"Dēmo, (really) gochisō-sama." (thanks for the treat.)

He leaves his seat by saying:

"Gomen kudassai." ..... "Excuse me."

He leaves his friend's house temporarily on the day's business, and as he goes out of the house he says:

"Ite-mairi-masu." (I am going).....This expression indicates that he will return in time.

The hostess then salutes him by saying:

"Ite-irasshai-mase." ("God speed" in a lighter sense.)

Mr. Yoshida leaves his friend's house and next he calls on another friend. As he enters the house he is greeted with:

"Irasshai-mase." ..... "Welcome" and "Kon-nichi wa." ..... "Good day."

The mistress of the house greets him with the usual Japanese salutation:

"Taihen oatsu gozai-masu." ..... "It is exceedingly warm."

She offers him a cushion to sit on, then she may say:

"Dōzo, oraku ni." ..... "Please be at home." The visitor may now say:

"Maido iro-iro osewa ni nari-mashi-te." .....

(ever) (various) (kindness) (I receive)

("I thank you for being ever so kind to me.")

She replies:

"Dō-iteshi-ma-hite, kochira-koto." .....

(Don't mention) (this side that owes)

("Don't mention, it is we that owe you more kindness.")

"Oisogashii de-shō." ..... "Suppose you are busy."

Conversation between the visitor and the hostess now dwells on various topics. One remarks:

"Toki ni, furi wa sen-deshō ka." ..... "By the way, don't you think it is going to rain?"

"Daijyobu de-shō." ..... ("I think you 'can count upon' (that it won't.)

"Kyo wa nan-nichi de-su ka." ..... "What day of the month is this?"

"Ju-go nichi de, Fudō sama no en-nichi desu.".....

"This is the 15th and is the fete-day of the Fudō temple."

"Naruhodo. ...." Really."

Ocha de-mo-hitotsū oagari-nasai.".....

(tea) (even) (just) (take) (do)

("Take even a little tea." (nothing else better to serve.)

"Gochisō-sama de-shita." ..... ("Thank you for the treat.)

"Oiyama de-shita." ..... I am afraid I bothered you."

(bother (it) was

"Minasama e yoroshiku." ..... " (Please) Give my regard to all."

"Arigatō gozai-masu." ..... "Thank you very much."

"Chotto omachi kudasai." ..... "A moment, please wait"

The hostess hands over a little present for his family, and the visitor remarks:

"Omiyage to wa, itami-iri-masu."

(present) (what?) (very much obliged)

("to-wa" indicates a surprise.)

"Dō itashi-mashite." ..... "Please don't mention."

"Orei ni kyoshuky shi-nasu." .....

(your thanks) (to) (apologize) (do)

("I am more grateful for your thanks.")

(It is unworthy of your thanks.)

The visitor is now about leaving the house when the hostess remarks:

"O! furidashi-ta; kasa wo omochi-nasai." ..... O! it has started to rain; please take an umbrella."

"Sore niwa oyobi-masu mai." ..... I don't think it is necessary."

"Ohiroi desu ka." ..... Are you walking?"

"Sayo-desu." ..... (It is so) As he leaves the house

at last, she says:

"Waza-waza, empō e; arigatō gozari-mashita.".....

(expressly) (far to) (thank you)

("I thank you for taking so much trouble to come this far.")

"Dō itashi mashite.".....

(Indeed not)

He now returns to his first friend's house, and as he enters, he says:

"Tada-ima.".....

(just now)

("I am back now.") And, he is welcomed with:

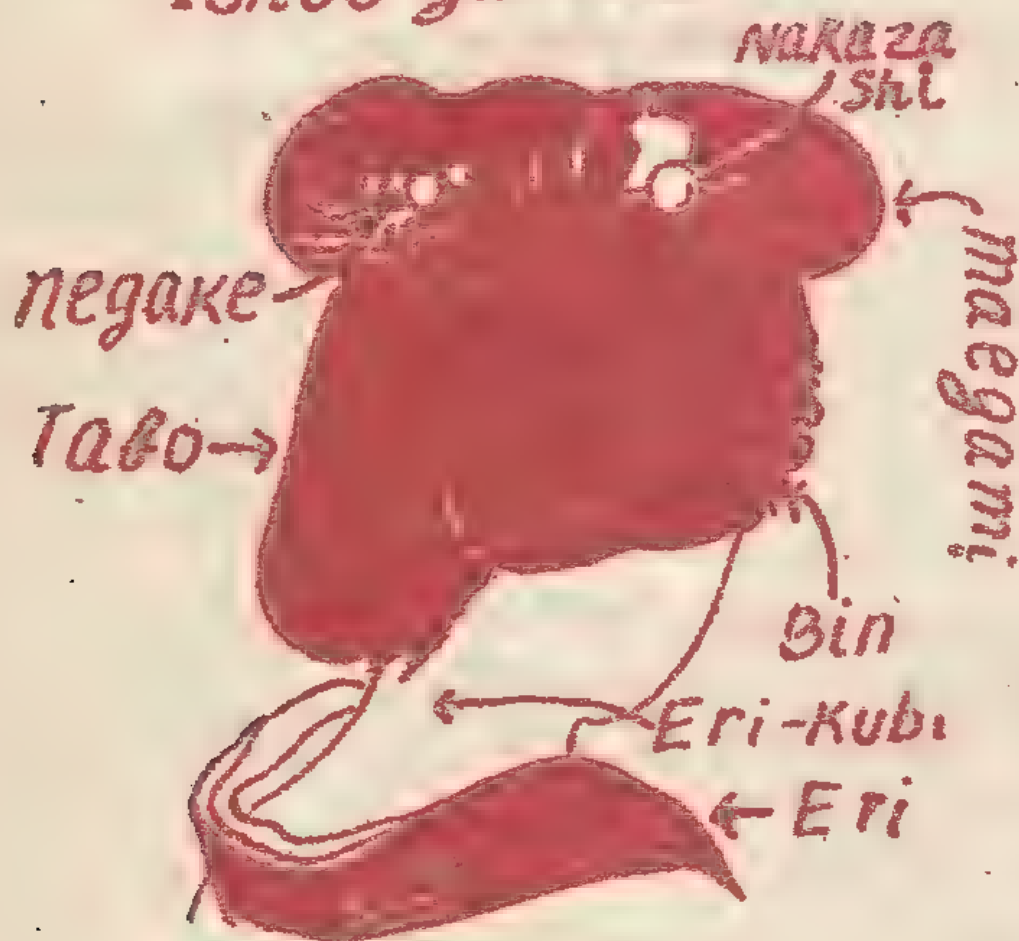

"Okaeri-nasai."..... ("You are back now"..... "We welcome your return.")

"Otsukare de-shō."..... ("Suppose you are tired.")

"Dō-itashi-mashi-te."..... ("O, no.")

"Oyasumi-nasai."..... "Please rest." or "Good night."

SIMPLIFICATION OF CHINESE

The Japanese have not neglected to simplify Chinese words, to suit their own convenience, in writing that most complicated ideographs in the world. When this is done, the Chinese characters become most simple and convenient in practical use. For, in what language can one write, for instance, the name of a country, in one stroke of the typewriter? This can be done in Chinese ideographs through the ingenious simplification adopted by Japanese, as the following examples will show:

English Spelling.	Chinese Ideographs.	Simplified Japanese Ideographs.
England (7 letters)	英吉利 (3 characters)	英 (1 character) Ei
America (7 " )	亞米利加 (1 " )	米 (1 " ) Bei
France (6 " )	佛蘭西 (3 " )	佛 (1 " ) Futsu
Germany (7 " )	獨逸 (2 " )	獨 (1 " ) Doku
Italy (5 " )	伊太利 (3 " )	伊 (1 " ) I
Russia (6 " )	露西亞 (3 " )	露 (1 " ) Ro
China (5 " )	支那 (2 " )	支 (1 " ) Shi
Europe (6 " )	歐羅巴 (3 " )	歐 (1 " ) O
Asia (4 " )	亞細亞 (3 " )	亞 (1 " ) A
Tokyo (5 " )	東京 (2 " )	京 (1 " ) Kei
Yokohama (8 " )	橫濱 (2 " )	濱 (1 " ) Hin
Osaka (5 " )	大阪 (2 " )	阪 (1 " ) Han
Kobe (4 " )	神戶 (2 " )	神 (1 " ) Shin

Each character in red color is picked up in Japanese simplification to denote a country or place.

"England and America" (17 letters)

is written in Japanese .....英米 (2 characters)

"England, America, France, Germany and Italy" (35 letters) is written in Japanese .....英米佛獨伊 (5 " )

"Europe and Asia" (13 letters) is written in Japanese .....歐亞 (2 " )

"Tokyo and Yokohama" (16 letters) is written in Japanese .....京濱 (2 " )

"Osaka and Kobe" (12 letters) is written in Japanese .....阪神 (2 " )

A Japanese typist hits only twice at the key-board to write "England and America" while the same words require 17 strokes in English. To write in English "England, America, France, Germany and Italy" requires 38 strokes while in simplified Japanese form only 5 strokes at the key-board would suffice.

Railway and electric lines in Japan are always designated by these abbreviations, such as "Kei-Hin" or "Han-Shin" instead of "Tokyo-Yokohama" or "Osaka-Kobe" lines respectively. Ideograms have surely their advantage.

Nip it in the bud.

Don't tell stories.

Go at it earnest!

Cool off.

'Tis none of your business.

What's the use?

Let it alone.

Beat it.

Not on your life.

Put me next.

Be done away with it.

Drop in now and then.

Let's bury the tomahawk.

Switch on the light.

Let sleeping dogs lie.

Let's take a ride on a taxi

Look before you leap.

Try to tinker a bill.

What do I care!

See into it.

Hands off!

Let's split the difference.

Don't trouble yourself.

Refresh your memory.

Give me a helping hand.

Don't you burn your fingers!

Why dillydally about it?

Go at it with all your might.

Don't you jump at the conclusion.

Don't carry water on both shoulders.

Go at it. Don't lose your chance.

Put a little more ginger into your work.

Put me next to the proposition.

Cut your cost according to your cloth.

Don't be too cocksure about it.

Put that in you pipe and smoke it.
